

The NRT of Easton & Sheep Pasture

At the Natural Resources Trust of Easton (NRT), we make it our mission to educate children and adults about the significant natural and cultural resources surrounding them. To fulfill our mission, we strive to acquire and preserve land of special character in Easton for the benefit of the general public.

Sheep Pasture, the NRT's working farm and conservation area, is home to chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, goats, mini-horses, a cow, and of course - sheep! Located off Main Street in Easton, Sheep Pasture is a 154-acre property comprised of numerous wild habitats ranging from forest to meadow and stream to marsh. These beautiful habitats provide homes for a number of local plant and wildlife species. The diversity and natural beauty of the area creates an extraordinary learning environment for children of all ages.

The NRT is proud to offer a wide variety of environment-based programming to scout troops in the surrounding area. During our programs, we aim to connect children with nature, in a fun and exciting manner, while we learn about all aspects of the natural world.
